PHILOSOPHY STATEMENT

I believe that many of today's problems can be solved by tapping into the wisdom of the collective.

Leaders must develop the skills and capacity necessary to build trust-based cultures so individuals feel safe enough to share their ideas and innovative thinking can flourish.

Because of this belief I'm committed to working with leaders who are willing to encourage others to explore and bring forward their unique purpose and passion. The outcome? Increased personal fulfillment for the leader and their teams, higher engagement, problems are solved – and things get done - faster!

I'm also committed to creating interactive experiences with nature – in training rooms, hotel conference settings, and awe-inspiring places in the wild. Nature is an amazing teacher. A sense of awe and/or playfulness is often experienced and catalyzes new ways of seeing old problems. Participants become aware of underlying connections and are reminded we are part of something much larger than our individual selves.
