Our students learn to think rationally, creatively, and critically; to communicate clearly, correctly, and persuasively; to gather and interpret data; and to engage the arguments of others with understanding and respect. We prepare our students to become leaders in an increasingly diverse society.

What do we want students to know when they graduate in this major?

What do we want students to know how to do when they graduate in this major?

* Some courses are experimental and some faculty have learning goals for their courses that do not fit neatly into departmental or area goals.