Wushu has come to be associated with the Chinese martial arts comprising a multitude of styles that have developed into an internationally competitive sport. Forms or routines serve as the basis of Wushu teaching and practice. Every movement must exhibit sensible combat application and aestheticism. Modern competition Wushu routines were developed from traditional martial arts styles and are known for their impressive speed, power, and acrobatics.

The club is interested in giving UW students a chance to experience this rich martial art, and no experience is necessary to come join us at practices!

The Husky Wushu Club serves the University of Washington’s students, faculty and staff to promote the art of Wushu.
