

Dear colleagues,

We are pleased to inform you that effective August 1, 2009, the Office of International Students and Scholars will be reorganized into two distinct operations, the International Scholars Office (ISO) and International Student Services (ISS). This reorganization will promote efficient and cost effective operations while maintaining the strengths of the organization's mission to provide essential services to the University of Washington's international community of students and scholars.

The International Scholars Office (ISO), which supports the faculty / scholar community, will remain within the Office of Academic Personnel under Vice Provost Cheryl A. Cameron. The International Scholars Office will be located in 239 Gerberding Hall and will assist academic departments that sponsor international faculty / scholars and provide support to faculty / scholars from abroad.

International Student Services (ISS) will join the Office of Student Life under Vice President and Vice Provost Eric Godfrey, in which international admissions and advising are naturally aligned. International Student Services will remain located in 459 Schmitz Hall and will continue providing visa and immigration advising to all undergraduate and graduate degree-seeking students, exchange students, and visiting students who are in the US on F or J student visas.
