Nature of Organization

There are 14 units and offices that comprise Student Life. They all share a common goal: supporting the success of our students, both here at the UW and beyond. You will find information about services and programs that will help students navigate the University, stay physically and mentally healthy, meet new friends and network, develop a career path, explore housing options, register for classes, manage finances, learn about scholarships, and much more.

Duties and Responsibilities

Assist the team in the Office of Student Life. Greet guests in person, answer and direct incoming telephone calls using a multi-line phone system. Respond to questions and inquires about Student Life policies and procedures, interact with students, parents and other visitors concerning services and give out appropriate materials. Schedule appointments and meetings for professional staff. Check in guests as they arrive for meetings. Notify staff of meeting cancellations and take messages as necessary. Take meeting minutes as needed. Execute various individual projects for the Directors in Student Life; both small and large scale tasks which may include assisting in scholarship events, creating print publications for various units, organizing meetings, etc. Must be available to assist the Directors in Student Life during school breaks (summer, winter, spring) and communicate planned vacations two weeks in advance. A significant amount of time will be spent on creating publications which include posters, flyers, brochures, meeting agendas, certificates, document forms, event invitations, and more for units under Student Life. Must be able to understand and follow University brand guidelines, as outlined by UW Marketing. Organize and manage confidential files with attention to detail and sensitivity of information. Manage email correspondences, appointments and phone calls on behalf of the staff and assist in other basic office duties: copying, scanning, faxing, filing, phone calls, etc. Coordinate projects between units and take the initiative to ask for clarification or further prompts on projects. Must distribute work time in an efficient manner as the office includes staff in multiple units with widely varying activities.
