“An admirably coherent analysis of the complex social relationships that shaped the Pu’er market . . . and a fine addition to the literature on the cultural biographies of commodities.” —China Quarterly

Forests Are Gold examines the management of Vietnam’s forests during the tumultuous twentieth century. Forest policy has rarely been about ecology or conservation for nature’s sake, but about managing citizens and society, a process McElwee terms “environmental rule.”

In this time of climate change and neoliberal expansion, shared waterways in the Peruvian highlands illustrate how water is becoming entangled in political, social, and cultural concerns. Andean Waterways traces how access to and control over water affects political and ecological relations as the glaciers recede.

Since Brazil first encouraged large-scale Amazonian colonization, violence and confusion have often accompanied national policies. For Amazonian inhabitants (from highly capitalized ranchers to landless workers), property is a dynamic category that becomes salient in the making: it is conjured through papers, appeals to state officials, and the manipulation of landscapes and memories of occupation.

In this time of climate change and neoliberal expansion, shared waterways in the Peruvian highlands illustrate how water is becoming entangled in political, social, and cultural concerns. Andean Waterways traces how access to and control over water affects political and ecological relations as the glaciers recede.
These case studies show the scale of Chinese influence in the region and the ways in which various countries mitigate their unequal relationship with China by negotiating asymmetry, circumventing hegemony, and embracing, resisting, or manipulating the terms dictated by Chinese capital.

This volume turns to the intimate territory of the family to challenge prevailing scholarly assumptions about gender and generational hierarchies in Chinese society. Case studies examine factors such as social class, geography, and globalization as they relate to patriarchal practice and resistance to it. The contributors bring the concept of patriarchy back to the heart of China studies while rethinking its significance in dominant Western-centric theories of modernity.

Enclaves along the India-Bangladesh border, pieces of India inside of Bangladesh, and vice versa, are spaces in which national security, belonging, and control are shown in sharp relief. Through ethnographic and historical analysis, Cons argues that these spaces are key locations for rethinking the production of territory in South Asia today.

Exploring several utopian imaginaries and practices, A Place for Utopia surveys the early twentieth century to the present, the biographical and the anthropological, the cultural and the conjunctural, South Asia, Europe, and North America.
