ANNOUNCING A NEW BOOK SERIES FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON PRESS

Food, People, Planet

Access to safe, healthy, ethically and sustainably produced food has become a pressing contemporary concern. The Food, People, Planet series publishes scholarly work that critiques the large-scale social inequities and environmental damage produced by international food production and distribution. It also invites work that imagines alternatives and articulates grass-roots transformations in food systems and food and eating. Through considerations of ethical, environmental and cultural dimensions of eating, health and nourishment, the Food, People, Planet series contributes to the vibrant and expanding interdisciplinary field of critical food studies.

Food is an optic through which to examine social justice, inequality, anti-racist and anti-sexist practices, climate change and dispossession. The cultural dimensions of health and nourishment encompass practices, narratives and ideologies important in understanding the relationships among food, people and places. The series welcomes new work that explores all of these connections including food sovereignty, food and embodiment, as well as the cultural politics of food production and consumption. We especially encourage submission of critical work that opens up these conversations to a wider audience, offering points of entry to interested readers seeking a deeper understanding of the future of food.

Series Editors

Lucy Jarosz is Chair and Professor in the Department of Geography at the University of Washington. Her teaching and research interests center upon the political economy/ecology of food and agriculture. She has worked on questions of hunger, poverty, food and agriculture in southern Africa and North America. Her recent research appears in the Journal of Rural Studies, Food, Culture and Society, Agriculture and Human Values, Dialogues in Human Geography, and Gender, Place and Culture.

!Lucy Jarosz

Ann Anagnost is a professor of anthropology at the University of Washington. Her areas of teaching and research range from the cultural politics of contemporary China to practices of self-care through diet and nutrition in the contemporary United States. She is the author of National Past-Times: Narrative, Representation, and Power (Duke University Press, 1997), co-editor of Global Futures in East Asia (Stanford University Press, 2013), and author of “Securing the Home Front: The Pursuit of ‘Natural Living’ among Evangelical Christian Homemakers” (Social Politics 20[2013],2:274-295).

!Ann Anagnost

Please direct all questions and submissions to:

Larin McLaughlin
Editor in Chief | University of Washington Press | lmclaugh@uw.edu

www.washington.edu/uwpress/books/series/